

Animal Agriculture in China

Program Description

Students will spend 3 weeks in China studying Chinese animal agriculture practices and its animal product consumption patterns. Students will station at China Agricultural University in Beijing, and Chinese faculty and industry leaders will be invited to deliver lectures. Experts of American companies related to animal agriculture in China will also be invited to give seminars on their foreign business development and management. Additionally, students will be arranged to experience the culture, cuisine, language, and sightseeing of China during this program. In short, this program will provide valuable, informative, educational, enjoyable, and memorable experiences for students to well prepare themselves for their careers in the global profession related to animals and animal products.
